FIRST TERM ENGLISH EXAM

Timing : 03h

Text :

The societies of the past showed an exceptional respect for the people among them who had qualities. For example, they used to regard courage as a feature that no other thing could equal. Loyalty either to one`s country or the family and friends alike also acquired in their view a price that had to be honored by every member of the community. Other features like honesty, wisdom, generosity and the readiness to sacrifice one`s life for some ideal used to be worshipped individuals possessing them were much admired.

Today, important changes have affected every nation in this field. Many people think that only money is important. As a result the attitudes which have acquired the highest importance are quite different from what had a sacred nature to the past generation. Now, people view the ability to make money and achieve professional success as attributes that hold the top level in this new evaluation. The faster someone amasses material possessions and turns into a wealthy person, the more consideration he earns from people.

Moral values are often relegated into a lower position. Such a situation usually produces in the minds of the young the eagerness to put their hopes in music, sport and business because these spheres offer them much chances to get rich and famous quickly.
