Third Term English Exam

Duration : 02h30

Subject two

Text:

From 206 BC to 200 AD ambitious emperors of the Chinese Han dynasty gained control of a region stretching from the Pacific Ocean to the Tarin basin. They built northern military outposts along the Great Wall and the edges of the desert to protect the long trade caravans against attacking nomadic tribesmen. Persian, Arab, and Indian traders visited the Han capital, and the eastern part.

In 105 BC the Han colonized parts of northern Korea. Chinese culture filtered into the indigenous Korean kingdoms of Koguryo (Goguryo), Silla, Paekche (Baekche) and Kaya (Gaya). To the south the Chinese imposed their culture on Vietnam, which they directly ruled for about 1,000 years.

Chinese culture during the Han dynasty reached new heights in pottery, sculpture, painting, music, and literature, especially after the invention of papermaking. Chinese engineers built roads and canals comparable to those of the Romans. A prosperous, urbanized society tried to live by Confucian moral ideals.

As the Han dynasty declined, frontier tribesmen became stronger in their attacks. Waves of Turkic, Mangol, and Hunnish invaders attacked tribal movements that spread through central Asia, into Europe. Many Chinese fled south, where a Chinese state formed in the Yangtze River valley. Chinese civilization advanced despite these setbacks with Buddhism and native Daoism emerging as the dominant religions.
