Part One: Reading and Interpreting

Read the text carefully then do the activities below.

Multicultural situations are not a new phenomenon in the world history: In the Middle East and the Mediterranean world, a multiplicity of cultures has always coexisted since antiquity.

From the time of Alexander the Great, Greek speaking urban elites dominated lower groups pertaining to a wide variety of languages, religions and cultural traditions from Egypt to Central Asia or Northern India. With Islam, the religion and language of ruling groups changed, but the cultural mosaic was kept.

Contemporary multicultural situations differ however by many features from their antecedents. The process of globalization, which started at the time of the discovery, was dramatically speeded up in the second half of the 20th century by the new technologies of rapid transportation and telecommunication. Because of the increased mobility linked with air travel, people in remote areas are discovering new styles of life through their contacts with tourists. International migrations develop and a growing number of foreign groups settle in the great cities because of the new facilities of telecommunication. It is easy for migrants to maintain contacts with their home countries: it gives to their cultures more chance to survive.
