Read the passage carefully then do the activities.

Most people work in order to earn their living, and produce goods and services. Goods are either agricultural (like maize and milk) or manufactured (like cars and paper). Services are such things as education, medicine and commerce. Some people provide goods, some provide services. Other people provide both goods and services. For example, in the same garage a man may buy a car or he may buy some service which helps him to maintain his car. Of course, most people hope to earn enough money to buy commodities and services which are non-essential but which provide some particular personal satisfaction, like toys for children, visits to the cinema or the theatre, and trips.

The work which people do is called economic activity. All economic activities together make up the economic system of a town, a city, a country or the world. The work which people undertake either provides what they need or provides the work with which they can buy essential commodities.
